1. Image Collection

Task 1 We were instructed to capture two sets of images. The subject of both sets was an object placed in a 3D calibration grid and the difference between the two sets was the type of transformation between the images in said set. The first set FD, has images which horizontally pivoted around the grid, whilst the second set HG, contained images taken from the same position but with varying zoom and rotation. See Appendix 5.1 and Appendix 5.2 for the FD and HG sets respectively.

2. Correspondence Analysis

In this task, we were told to compare two methods of correspondence matching, automatic and manual, with two metrics being asked for: quality and quantity.

Each coursework task should have its section in this report. It should include outputs specified in task description e.g. figures or tables, and a discussion of each presented figure or table e.g. the main observations and their explanation.

Table 1, Figures, graphs, and photographs/ All graphics should be centred. Please ensure that any point you wish to make is resolvable in a printed copy of the paper. Resize fonts in figures to match the font in the body text, and choose line widths which render effectively in print.

When placing figures in LATEX, it's almost always best to use `\includegraphics`, and to specify the figure width

Method	Quantity	Quality
		Mean	Median	Skew
Manual	tmp	tmp	tmp	tmp
Automatic (KAZE)	tmp	tmp	tmp	tmp

Table 1: T1.2 Results of....

as a multiple of the line width as in the example below

\usepackage[dvips]{graphicx} ...
\includegraphics[width=0.8\linewidth]
{myfile.eps}
